SANGUINARY CONFLICT.

A Bitter Fight Between English Sparrows and a Rat.

A novel battle was fought yesterday in a corner of the Brooklyn navy-yard, says the New York Star. The combatants were a number of sparrows and a large dock rat.

The rat was quietly feeding on a piece of bread, which had been washed ashore by the tide, when an inquisitive sparrow discovered him. The sparrow did not dare attack the rat alone, but perched on a pole directly above the rodent and set up a loud chattering, which was immediately answered by another sparrow, that was quickly followed by more, until the writer counted twenty-two of the birds.

Having gathered their forces the little army began a systematic attack upon the enemy. All this time the rat paid little or no attention to the birds, being busily engaged in eating. At first the little robbers formed a circle around the rat. At that moment the rat stopped eating, and looking up discovered that he was surrounded by the enemy. But, being confident of his strength and ability to rout the birds at any moment, he returned to his feast. One of the sparrows flew around the rat several times, and making a dash pecked him upon the back. The rodent turned quickly, leaving for a moment the bread unprotected, where one of the birds seized, attempting to fly away with it, but the bread was too heavy for the bird to carry.

As the rat attacked one bird two others attacked him from the rear. Finally the birds were put to flight, and once more the rat was in possession of the coveted crust. He did not attempt to finish his meal, but watched closely the birds that had retired some distance to hold a council of war.

The council did not last long, for presently they flew at the rat from all sides, until he was finally compelled to seek shelter under a log, leaving the bread to the victors.

The rat was loth to yield to the birds so easily, and as one of them came near his hiding place he rushed out and killed it. The onslaught was so sudden that the birds were taken by surprise, and on seeing the body of their dead companion they made a rush at the rat, and he was again forced to retreat.

The battle raged fiercely, at first largely in favor of the rat, but the latter was finally compelled to seek safety by taking to the water and swimming for the opposite shore, about forty feet away.

As soon as the rat took to the water the birds flew above him, compelling him to remain under the water more than half the time, which was fast exhausting him.

When the rat emerged from the water he was very weak from the long swim and felt an easy victim to the birds, that soon had both his eyes pecked out and nearly all the fur off his back. Not being able to see, the poor rat staggered about in a helpless manner and could do nothing to protect himself. At last he lay down and died.

Being satisfied that their enemy was dead the birds flew away, forgetting the bread that had been the cause of the fight in which one of their number and the rat had died.

THE STATISTICAL FIEND.

A Man of Figures Explains How One May Kill Time.

A man whose head is bulging with mathematical problems has figured out the disposition of every hour of the daily life of an average man, and tells just how many hours a man of fifty has devoted to his toilet, meals or newspaper.

"Let us assume," said he, "that the sleeping hours of an average man will number eight daily. That is one-third of his time, so that in fifty years your man will have slept, all told, sixteen years and eight months. The man who is shaved daily at fifty years probably had his face scraped not oftener than three times per week at twenty-five years, while during his first eighteen years a razor never touched his face.

"Say that the average man has averaged two shaves a week for fifty years, that will give 5,700 shaves in the half century. At an average of fifteen minutes per shave the time devoted to this one small element of life will run up to fifty-nine days and nine hours.

"If a man should not shave in fifty years, and then attempt to make up his proportion all at once, he would have to shave night and day for nearly two months. The average man who is not limited to twenty minutes for dressing, breakfast and catching the train consumes about thirty minutes in getting ready for the day in the morning.

"Half an hour per day for fifty years would amount to one year, fifteen days and five hours, so that if a man should dress himself at the start in life for the whole fifty years, says the Baltimore Sun, he would pass two weeks beyond his first birthday anniversary, and this means working twenty-four hours per day."

School-day Reminiscences.

A school-girl frolic was given in honor of Mrs. Cleveland by her college mates during her recent trip to Buffalo. The refreshments were crackers, passed around in paper bags, and the pickles were out in force, while sardines were served with fresh fingers in a bowl of butter and relished as in the old days of "brataries and early rising. The occasion was enlivened by reminiscences of school-day escapades, when oysters were fried over a gas jet, and cheese toasted on hair-pins.

A Temperance Protest.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., which has been in session at Fresno, Cal., has adjourned sine die. Before adjourning it passed a resolution of protest against the use of State funds to push the wine interest of California.

A Rough Experience.

GUTHRIE, Ind. T., Oct. 12.—W. P. Thompson, editor of the Guthrie Daily News, who went up into the Otco country, in the Cherokee strip, yesterday, has returned, after having twenty-four hours of as thrilling an experience as any one might desire.

A big pow-wow had been called among the Otcos, and Thompson, desiring to investigate the discontent of the Otcos, who are leaving their reservation in large numbers, attended it, and a party of friendly Indians escorted him from Red Rock, on the Santa Fe, to the lodge of Chief White Horse, four miles away, where the pow-wow was called.

Here the big talk was about to begin, when a band of Indian police surrounded the place and demanded of Thompson to come with them. The two interpreters who were with Thompson smelled danger and made their escape. Thompson refused to be arrested, and taking his baggage, began to walk away. His walk was changed to a run, and under cover of darkness he reached the station, where he found a hiding-place beneath a truck. The police were on his trail, however, and he was shortly discovered and compelled to walk fourteen miles, surrounded by the mounted Indians. The latter only told him that the agent wanted him. Arriving finally at the agency, Wootley, who is the acting agent, got out of bed, and after insulting Thompson, told him to go. The agent refused him shelter, food or guidance, and surrounded by redskins, panthers and coyotes, with a full moon shining, he made his way to a trail, followed it until he reached a bridge where the span was broken. He took shelter from the wild animals upon a tree and waited for daybreak.

Human Hyenas.

CONCORD, Mass., Oct. 14.—Yesterday afternoon, while attending a burial at the Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, two gentlemen discovered that the grave of Ralph Waldo Emerson had been disturbed. The authorities were notified, and it was found that the grave had been opened on Saturday night, exposing the casket. Whether the remains have been taken out or not is not known at present, as the authorities are waiting the return of Dr. Edward Emerson, the philosopher's son, who telegraphed for a watch to be placed at the grave, but the general opinion here is that the miscreants accomplished their object, and secured at least the skull, which was probably what they were after. Great indignation is felt over the outrage.

The Cronin Case.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—The Grand Jury impeached this morning to hear further evidence in the Grand Jury bribery cases of bailiffs Hanks and Solomon, Ganger, Ordonel and Tom Kavanagh, were called in and testified. It is understood that Kavanagh and Lawyer Beggs, one of the men on trial for the Cronin murder, have made a full confession; at any rate, this afternoon the Grand Jury returned indictments against John Graham, the clerk and confidential man for the noted criminal lawyer, A. S. Trude, for complicity in the jury bribing conspiracy, and also true bills against the six men indicted on Saturday. Graham was arrested last night.

Graham was the man who put up the money with which to bribe the

A Landowner's Protest—A Blum

By Cable and Associated Press.]

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Great real estate owners like the Duke of Westminster are opposing with all the means in their power the improvements involving a sequestration of the ground in the heart of the city for widening some of the streets and the piercing of new thoroughfares to relieve the congested state of some of the main avenues.

The traffic of the new outlet from the Strand to Holborn will involve the demolition of a line of buildings not very ornamental, to be sure, but yielding large rentals, and the owners are frantic with indignation at what they do not hesitate to call a robbery. The amount of compensation in such cases is always unsatisfactory, and it is certain the scheme for street improvements will bring upon the heads of the Council a perfect avalanche of law suits. Visitors to London, as well as residents, will hail with joy the widening of the Strand, but the owners of the buildings there are much concerned at the threatened obstruction of all business while the improvements are being made and the consequent loss of rents.

The Socialists feel a grim satisfaction in every incident which increases the discontent of the rank and file of any of the continental armies with their Governments. The recent strike of the dock laborers at Flensburg was easily crushed by the authorities, who put the soldiers at work loading and unloading vessels in the strikers' places. The strike of the bakers in Berlin recently was ended by the same arbitrary process, bakers having been detailed from the ranks of the soldiers to supply the places of the men who had refused to work, and the latter had to submit. The memory of these acts will not quickly die out. The soldiers do not obey such orders willingly, and these are only so many more items added to the long account which the down-trodden masses are patiently awaiting an opportunity to settle.

Acted in Bad Faith.

BUFFALO, Oct. 14.—Wm. E. Curtis, manager of the Pan-American excursion, is much exercised over the results of Erasmus Wiman's dinner to the delegates at Niagara Falls last night. Curtis says Wiman was one of the Committee of Entertainment at New York, and subsequently asked that he be allowed to give the delegates a dinner at Niagara Falls. Curtis replied that Blaine's instructions were that no formalities be entered on Sunday; that during the trip the delegates be allowed to do as they liked; but that afterwards it was arranged that Wiman should give a dinner, but that it should be entirely informal, and that there be no speeches. Curtis says that notwithstanding this, Wiman left copies of his proposed speech with the newspapers in New York.

Before leaving, Curtis this morning telegraphed Blaine that Wiman had acted in bad faith. The party reached here from Niagara Falls this morning, and were driven in carriages to the City Hall, where they were received by the Mayor and others, and were then driven about the city.

Longnecker that the evidence against him is very conclusive. After presenting their indictments the Grand Jury adjourned, but the State's attorney says the case by no means ends with the present indictments, but it will be more far-reaching than the most sanguine can suppose. Other indictments may be expected in short order.

Said one of the State's attorney's assistants to-day: "Bailiffs Solomon and Hanks and Tom Kavanagh have agreed to tell all they know regarding the plot. We are sure, therefore, of reaching the head and front of the conspiracy."

A Wife-Murderer.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14.—Mrs. Maggie Mendoza, who deserted her husband, Antonio L. Mendoza, a barber at the Grand Hotel, some time ago, was shot and killed by him this morning at a lodging house on Sutter street.

Mrs. Mendoza had left her husband several times to become an inmate of questionable houses, but had been taken back by him on promises of reform.

She again left him a few weeks ago, and he found her last night in the lodging house where she was living with Albert Larzen. She resisted all his entreaties to return to him, so, after remaining with her all night, he went out this morning and purchased a pistol, completed some business arrangements, and returning to the house, shot his wife in the temple. A policeman entered the room a few minutes later, and found the woman dying and Mendoza in the act of blowing out his own brains. The officer prevented this, and took him to the Police Station. It was Mendoza's intention to kill Larzen, the man with whom his wife was living, and he was waiting for Larzen to come to the room when the officer entered.

Popular Works of Fiction.

No one is better qualified by opportunity and experience to form a correct judgment as to the relative popularity of certain widely read novels than Miss Ellen M. Coe, Librarian of the New York Free Circulating Library. Miss Coe predicts that "Ben-Hur" will outlast "Robert Elsmere" in public favor. "Ben-Hur" has passed "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which in 1857 headed the list of fiction in greatest demand. "Ben-Hur" is the single volume of fiction most constantly sought in the Maimonides Library in New York. Considering its theme, this testimony to the merits of "Ben-Hur," as accorded by the popular verdict, is significant.

The Water Question.

Pending the irrigation agitation, and now that it promises to materialize in the near future—at least, so far as this county goes—if the land that can be reclaimed could be withdrawn from market, or the price per acre put up at a figure that would prevent its being taken up by speculators, it would be a good thing. Under the present law a man can get 640 acres, or less, by paying $1.25 per acre, paying 25 per cent. down, and having twenty-five years to pay the balance, at 6 per cent. per annum interest, and it stimulates an unhealthy condition of things, for a great many with small means will take up land and then wait for some one to bring the water to it purely as a matter of speculation, thereby hampering any legitimate undertaking. Our land laws are too liberal, and the State will find that she has virtually given away much of her most valuable territory. It has been the custom of stockmen to select the land bordering on a stream for its entire length for grazing purposes simply to control the water, and it is high time that it was stopped.

It is but necessary to point out one instance to show the policy of the GAZETTE's meaning: When it was deemed expedient last Winter to spend the $100,000 appropriated on the Carson river, certain parties immediately went up the valley and located 5,000 acres of the best land, and took up all the water that would have been stored by the Reclamation Committee. Nobody seemed to have protected the interests of the State in the matter, but all went in for a private speculation.

Out of an annual appropriation of $54,000,000 for postal service we expend $375,000 for carriage of the foreign mails. But nearly $228,000 of the sum, or seven-eighths, are paid to foreign steamship owners, and only about $47,000 to American carriers. Thus we pay to a German line $1.30 a mile for the service, and only ten cents to an American carrier of the mails to South America. With less mail service than the United States, says the Sacramento Record-Union, England pays nearly $4,000,000 for carriage of her postal matter. Germany has just appropriated $1,100,000 to a German steamer line to carry the mails to Australia and Asia, but we haggle over the grant of less than half a hundred thousand dollars for the carriage of our foreign mail matter. We allow but $11,000 for the carriage of our mails to Australia and Brazil, and $13,000 for mail transportation by American ships to Japan. We do not pay a cent for the transportation of our mails across the Atlantic in our own steamers, but we spend half a hundred thousand dollars for their carriage on small rivers of the West. The English believe that trade follows the flag, and hence they make no faces at the expenditure of some millions in subsidies for ocean mail carriage. It is not surprising, therefore, that our commerce with other nations is so meager on the routes where it should be gigantic. It is not surprising that our trade with South American States should be so limited, when it is known that in more than one case the American mails are carried to England and shipped thence to South American States contemporaneously with mail matter written or prepared a week or more later. We pay to stages in one small State of the Union just twice what we pay to American ships for carrying our mails to foreign parts, and yet we puzzle over the question why we are commercially cut off from the very ports where our trade should be the largest, forgetting that the English Government makes her mail subsidies the entering wedge for the opening up of trade with any foreign section. If our policy is not penny-wise and pound foolish, then we are incapable of understanding the simplest economy in business.

The average trotting horse man is a study. He comes up here from below and seems to think he is licensed to rob the community by every means that he can. Even a four-bit piece fished out of some unsuspecting individual is pulled in with a chuckle of satisfaction, and it seems to do him more good than would a dollar honestly obtained. Horse racing is all right when honestly conducted, but to say that it is decidedly demoralizing the way it would be conducted here if the horsemen had their way is but telling half the truth. They will resort to all kinds of dirty jobs and trickery to carry a point and rob the public and then laugh in their sleeves at their success. The GAZETTE is of the opinion that the Directors make a mistake when they go below and hire these fellows to come here to hippodrome through the circuit with not an honest intention behind them. Hang up the purses, and if they do not care to come here and honestly contest for them let them stay away, for the community would be better off without them. This does not apply to all, but to a very large majority.

THE Carson Fair closed Saturday after a successful week's sport. It was all that could have been wished for, and the Board of Directors are entitled to much credit for their able management. President Lee, Directors Williams, McCullough and Kersey and Secretary Torreyson were untiring in their endeavors to please and entertain visitors. The races were even better than those at Reno the previous week, for there were more contests, but it kept Judge Chamberlain on the lookout to see that there was no dirt done. From his impartial decisions he made many friends, and is at home in the judges' stand when any trickery is attempted.

REFERRING to the victory of Lyon county in her suit against the State for the expenses of the special lottery election last Winter, the Tuscarora Times says that "poor little Nevada will have to pay roundly for the work of the lottery schemers of last Winter."

Intelligent Clerks.
The female clerks who have obtained positions in the Treasury Department within four or five years are mostly young women who have just passed through the normal schools, and have entered the Government service through the Civil Service examination test. They are a bright lot of young women.

Unjust Taxation.
It is unjust to tax the stomach with burthens that it cannot bear. Many silly people thus tyrannize that faithful servant until it rebels and punishes them as they deserve. Dyspepsia is usually the child of gastronomic folly, but whether this or the natural associate of inherent feebleness from childhood, it is surely and pleasantly remediable with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the sweet and most highly sanctioned tonic in existence. As a result of the tone imparted to the stomach, and the increased activity of its digestive and assimilative action, insured by the persistent use of this benign invigorant, general stamina is augmented, the nerves strengthened and tranquilized, and a tendency to insomnia and hypochondria defeated. Biliousness, chills and fever, rheumatism and kidney troubles are conquered by this admirable medicine.

Its Excellent Qualities.
Command to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs. It is pleasing to the eye, and to the taste and by gently acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, it cleanses the system effectually, thereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

A Devoted Couple.
The widow of S. S. Cox was his inseparable companion. She shared all his plans and made his life her own. Mr. and Mrs. Cox were not only a devoted couple, but she was like a partner to him in his business, sharing his confidence in everything. Mr. Cox left the management of an unfinished book, which he intended to be his life work. He wrote the most of it as his desk in Congress, where the scene is laid.

San Francisco Meat Market.
Following are the rates for whole carcasses from slaughterers to dealers: BEEF—First quality, 66¢; second quality, 58¢; third quality, 48¢. PORK—Quotable at 56¢ for large and 76¢ for small. LAMB—Quotable at 88¢. MUTTON—Quotable at 66¢. PORK—Live hogs, on foot, grain fed, medium, 48¢; heavy, 48¢; soft, 48¢; dressed hogs, 74¢.

The New Discovery.
You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. You have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold, or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottle free at S. J. Hodgkinson's.

A Hale Old Man.
A hale old man, Mr. Jas. Wilson of Allens Springs, Ill., who is over sixty years of age, says: "I have in my time tried a great many medicines, some of excellent quality; but never before did I find any that would so completely do all that is claimed for it as Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is truly a wonderful medicine." For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

The Best There Is.
A new typewriter has been invented by the party who invented half of the Remington and all of the Caligraph. It has no ribbon, no wooden bars, but is all steel, prints true and without any blur. It costs an even hundred dollars, and is worth two of any other machine. It prints better, wears longer, is easier to learn and operates faster, besides other recommendations. C. A. BRAGG, Agent.

A Sound Legal Opinion.
E. Bainbridge, Munday Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Texas, says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother, who was very low with Malaria Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by the timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life." Mr. D. L. Wilcoxson of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: "He positively believes he would have died had it not been for Electric Bitters." This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all Malarial Diseases, and for all Kidney, Liver and Stomach disorders stands unequalled. Price, 50c and $1 at Hodgkinson's.

Muscle vs. Brains.
Henry Bradley, the head porter of the Lafayette Hotel, Philadelphia, is said to have made $100,000 out of his position. He owns a $15,000 house in which he lives in great comfort and some luxury. Fortunately for Mr. Bradley he did not turn his attention to literature. Handling trunks is a much more remunerative profession.

Backlen's Arnica Salve.
The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Hodgkinson & Co., Reno.

NEWLANDS' PURCHASE.

Heavy Real Estate Transaction on the Tributaries of the Truckee.
For some time past, says the Truckee Republican, negotiations have been pending between several Nevada gentlemen and the owners of property around Donner Lake. This week sales of most of the land have been consummated. The largest sale was by Brickell & Kruger to E. G. Newlands, the tract of land being all that at the foot of the lake. The reported consideration was $18,000. This property was purchased last May by Brickell & Kruger for $5,000, since which time they have constructed a dam at the outlet of the lake at a cost of $2,000, which is intended to raise the lake to high water mark. The other lands purchased belonged to J. F. Moody, E. B. Crocker, the Sierra Wood and Lumber Company, and negotiations are pending with others. Good prices were paid to all. There is a report that the owners of a full quarter section of land at the west end of the lake are holding off for a big price, and ask $18,000 for it. The plan is to at once commence the erection of a dam at the site of the old Towle mill which will raise the surface of the lake about twenty feet. This will be used to hold back the waters which go to waste in the spring time and will be drawn off during the summer to irrigate desert lands near Reno. We understand that Messrs. Mayberry, Wheeler, Fulton, Evans, Newlands, and possibly others are interested in the scheme. Whether they will carry it out themselves or transfer their interest to the State of Nevada (at a slight increase above their outlay) is not known here. But it is a big scheme and will be of great benefit to this section of the country.

We also understand that the syndicate has also purchased a reservoir site on the Little Truckee river, below Webber lake, and paid Stewart & Tiffany $4,000 for a tract of land there. The big irrigation scheme promises to loom up in grand style in a short time. The above is true in so far as it applies to the outlet of Donner. No other lands at Donner have been bought and probably never will be. The outlet of the lake will be lowered and the present dam used to raise the lake to high water mark.

SOCIAL TELEGRAPH.

A Valuable Line in Reno—Connect With the Line.
Among the many enterprises of Reno is the social telegraph line, which is deserving of notice. It was constructed several months ago and since that time its membership has increased greatly and now the ticking of the instruments is heard in nearly every quarter of the city. Many of the subscribers have become very proficient in the manipulation of the telegraph already, while many others are improving rapidly. It is conceded by many operators that one can become more proficient on a line of this kind where many practical operators work the wire than in telegraph schools where, perhaps, inexperienced teachers give instructions. It is undoubtedly a pleasant amusement and a valuable art to acquire. The line is not only used for social purposes, but much business is also transacted over it. The people are becoming acquainted with its advantages and are availing themselves of them. The expense of connecting is very little and all who wish can learn to operate at home, which is far more pleasant than going away to receive instructions. L. E. Lee, the manager, is receiving many applications for membership.

PERSONAL.

S. Wells returned this morning from California. Mr. and Mrs. D. Church returned Saturday evening from a trip to Carson and Virginia.

E. Gest, manager of the N. C. & O. railroad, returned yesterday from a trip to the Bay.

M. Nathan, the Virginia street clothier, went below Saturday evening after his fall and winter stock.

J. A. Fitzgerald of the Arcade Hotel returned yesterday from San Francisco, much improved in health.

G. W. Grayson of the Oakland butchering firm of Grayson, Owen & Co. arrived from below yesterday.

Miss Taddie Doane, who has been visiting her relatives at Carson, returned yesterday to her school at the Pyramid Reservation.

J. L. McDermott of Milford, Lassen county, Cal., arrived here last Saturday with 100 head of beef cattle, which he sold to J. N. Evans.

Shot in the Leg.

Last evening about dusk, during an altercation between Patsy Lananger and Tim O'Keefe, the former drew his revolver, but Dan O'Keefe, a brother of Tim, grabbed the pistol and turned the muzzle down, receiving the bullet through his left thigh, inflicting a painful, but not dangerous, wound. Dr. Bergstein, who dressed the wound, does not regard it as at all dangerous unless inflammation sets in.

Officer Baugh arrested the shooter and turned him over to Constable Unson, who lodged him in jail. Subsequently two other men were arrested for attempted interference with Lananger after his arrest.

Not Yet Captured.

W. H. McInness, Captain of the Guard at the State Prison, who was in town last evening, informed a GAZETTE reporter that Jesse Grant, the recently escaped convict, was seen last Saturday evening skulking in the willows near the V. & T. track a few hundred yards west of Carson. Jesse seems to be a good deal of a dodger, as this is the third time he has slipped away from the State "pen."

Railroad Notables.

Governor Stanford's private car, containing himself, A. N. Towne, W. H. Mills, Creed Haymond, ex-Congressman Loutitt, L. R. Wilbur, and other distinguished railroad people, passed East yesterday morning on the way to Ogden, where they go to meet the special committee of the United States Senate on the date of the Union and Central Pacific roads.

BREVITIES.

Local and General Intelligence.
Yesterday morning's west-bound train was nearly four hours late. Those wanting to rent a furnished house should read the 50-cent column. Those wanting hay baled should read J. H. Upson's 50-cent ad. in today's GAZETTE.

Go to Lange & Schmitt for ranges, parlor and cook stoves; best assortment in the State.

Santa Rosa, Cal., will in a public meeting to-day arrange a reception to Senator and Mrs. Stanford.

E. S. Wells, purser of the steamer Lakme, absconded while the vessel was lying at Astoria with $200.

The Daily Herald and Daily Gazette, published at Phoenix, A. T., have gone out of the Typographical Union.

This morning's west-bound overland, which was three and a half hours late, had four carloads of Phillips' Boston excursionists.

The funeral yesterday of the late Simeon Ira Bishop was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Lucas performed the funeral services.

The Oregon Short Line and the Utah Northern have brought suit to enjoin the Northern Pacific from discriminating against them.

The Salvation Army at Red Bluff, Cal., defies the local ordinances, and was beating the drums and marching through the streets last night.

Excellent, reliable and economical are the stoves and ranges sold by Lange & Schmitt; every house and store should have them. Call and inspect before purchasing.

Watch Repairing.
John Hamon, late of Minneapolis, has established himself in business in Reno, and is prepared to do thorough work in watch repairing. His place of business is opposite John Sunderland's shoe store. Read his ad.

FORTUNE SMILED GAYLY.
How a Family, On a Small Investment, Got Suddenly Rich.

A short time ago a number of ladies, of one family, at Hollister, in this State formed a club, the purpose of which was to woo Dame Fortune to smile upon them. With this view they jointly purchased a one-twentieth part of ticket No. 87,835, in the Louisiana State Lottery, and with fluttering expectation awaited the drawing. On the 15th of August last they were almost thrown into joyful hysterics over the news that No. 87,835 had drawn the capital prize. The ticket was placed in the hands of Wells, Fargo & Co., at Hollister, to whose agent J. G. Shaw, the Anglo-California Bank of this city, paid $15,000, which Mr. Shaw paid to the following ladies forming the club: Mrs. Emma Shaw, Mrs. William Shaw, Mrs. G. E. Shaw, Mrs. Rody Shaw, Mrs. B. F. Gould, Mrs. Etta Sowers, Mrs. S. E. Moore, Mrs. Wm. Wallace, Mrs. James A. Kearney, Miss Laura Roach, Miss N. Powers, Miss Susie Moore, Mrs. A. D. Shaw, Mrs. J. H. Shaw, Mrs. Robert Shaw, Mrs. E. G. Campbell, Mrs. L. T. Baldwin, Mrs. M. B. Black, Mrs. N. C. Briggs, Mrs. M. Speigle, Miss Hatfield Backus, Miss Ella Davis, Miss Maggie Meade and Miss Mary Mahoney.

Dame Fortune did not stop with these ladies, but smiled also upon San Francisco, where a gentleman, who refuses to allow his name to be made public, held another twentieth part of No. 87,835, and who, on the presentation of the same to the Anglo-California Bank, had his worldly stores increased to the extent of $15,000 in gold. —San Francisco (Cal.) Examiner, September 20.

Will Not Move.
The Truckee Republican says: W. H. Kruger, President of the Truckee Lumber Co., indignantly denies that his company has even the slightest intention of moving its factory to Verdi, as reported in the Reno Journal. The factory is a fixture in Truckee and the interests of the company are too extensive in this vicinity to warrant a removal.

Grand Carnival Masquerade Ball.
The Knights of Honor of Reno will give the grandest carnival masquerade ball on next Thanksgiving night at the Pavilion ever given in Reno. Two hundred and fifty dollars in prizes will be given away for the most original and best characters, lady or gentlemen, also for best group of six or more.

A Prosperous Family.
John Jacob Astor died worth $40,000,000 after beginning on a salary of $2 a week for beating furs in a damp cellar. The $40,000,000 left by him in 1849 has grown in forty years to $200,000,000. The Astors know the value of money, and never waste or spend it uselessly. The habits of the eldest Astor were as regular as a Dutch clock. His only recreation was a game of checkers; his only beverage was a glass of ale after dinner.

A Wealthy Mendicant.
W. A. Wallen, an old man and decrepit consumptive, was arrested at San Bernardino, Thursday, for stealing a roll of butter, and a search of his clothes brought forth bank-books, showing him to have $7,000 on deposit in Los Angeles and local banks.

AN UGLY DISCOVERY.
A Report That Should Be Read.
"A recent analysis of a celebrated chemist of ten popular brands of sarsaparilla discloses the astonishing fact that these ten samples of blood purifiers (?) contained in the aggregate sixteen different minerals, eleven of which were active poisons. Iodide of potash was discovered in every sample, mercury was found in all but two, while arsenic existed in six of the ten brands. Not one brand was the pure article."

A reporter took the above clipping to E. W. Joy, the manufacturer of Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. Mr. Joy exhibited no surprise. He said druggists knew it. He said he long ago saw the crying need for a safe and absolutely pure vegetable preparation of Sarsaparilla, hence his was named Joy's vegetable sarsaparilla, because it contained nothing but pure sarsaparilla, combined with the purest of California's vegetable alternatives. Unlike potato sarsaparilla, it does not force impurities through the skin but stimulates the various secretory organs thereby correcting functional derangements and eliminating all impurities through the natural channels. —San Francisco Examiner.

A Change For the Better.

Change is one of the irremediable and fortunately the change is almost invariably for the better. As an instance of this, St. Patrick's pills are fast taking the place of the old harsh and violent cathartics, because they are milder and produce a pleasant effect, besides they are much more beneficial in removing morbid matter from the system and preventing ague and other malarious diseases. As cathartics and liver pills they are always perfect. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty-five cents a bottle. 113

FREEDOM'S FLOWER.

"Let merry England proudly rear,
Her blended roses bought so dear,
And Scotland bind her bonnet blue
With heath and harebell dipped in dew.
On favored Erin's crest be set
The flower she loves of emerald green;
But ours, this new land of the West,
What emblem blossoms suits it best?
No fragrant herald of the spring,
No dainty, garden-nurtured thing,
But clad in sunshine glad and strong,
Self-sown, upspringing from the sod,
And scattered wide and lasting long,
Is Freedom's flower, the Golden-Rod.
High on the mountain crag it blooms,
The salt winds shake its yellow plumes;
And with its countless flowers behold
The prairie gleams a sea of gold;
While lonely coast and sterile place
Grow lovely with its waving grass.
Free, free, we gather it at will,
And leave each road-side shining still
And brave it blossoms, healing not,
Though storms beat wild, or stars burn hot,
Alike to all its flowers belong:
Through all the land it decks the sod:
It bids our hearts "Be glad; be strong;
The Freedom's flower, the Golden-Rod."
—Marian Douglas, in Hager's Bazar.

THE CLERK'S ROMANCE.

A Story with the Most Delightful Ending Imaginable.

I revealed in a dream of paradise. I thought sweet thoughts and cherished exquisite hopes. Not the young Prince of the "Arabian Nights" was so steeped, to the lips in bliss. I could have vowed that the odors of Araby were in the air, and that I heard angelic music.
Yet my surroundings were, to say the least, prosaic. I sat at a desk in an office in that domain of leather-dealers which New Yorkers have christened the Swamp—at all times a place of any thing but dainty pleasures—and this was midsummer at its hottest, and in a neighboring alley a disconsolate old organist was droning forth the tune yclep'd "John Brown's Body" to a group of dirty, barefoot children.

If I had looked about me I would have seen the closely shaven, mouse-colored heads of three young fellow-clerks, and the polished bald pate of two old ones, who were scratching away for dear life. I was the only one who was neglecting his work, but I was thinking of her—of the loveliest, divinest, most adorable she. My body was in the Swamp, but my soul was in a villa on the Hudson, where she dwelt and thought, no doubt, of me, and whence she had sent me a little pink, perfumed billet.
"Mr. Prince, Mr. Vandervitch would like to have you step into the office."
With these words a voice interrupted my blissful reverie—that of Dibbs, the messenger.

"At once," I replied.
I sprang to my feet, touched myself up with a pocket-comb at the little mirror in my desk, and hastened to obey the summons.

Mr. Vandervitch was by birth a Russian. He was a fierce-looking old gentleman, with a curiously-projecting light blue nose and an immense head of hair, which looked like what is called by those upon the stage a "fright wig." His mustache, revealed his age, and his mouth looked like that of the wolf who ate Red Riding-Hood.
On the present occasion he was actually alarming. He sat at a desk making cigarettes, which he smoked as fast as he made them, and during all his conversation he continued this occupation.

He began thus:
"So, Mr. Prince, I am glad to see you. I have been very anxious to do so all day."
"Thank you very much, sir," said I.
"You can spare your acknowledgments," he replied.
"It is as a curiosity that I take pleasure in looking at you. I wanted to gaze upon the audacious, impertinent, presuming and absurd clerk at fifteen dollars a week who has dared to address those to my daughter."

As he spoke he threw toward me a packet of letters, which I stopped as they flew by me in a manner which would have won me honors on a base-ball field.
They were my own, addressed to Miss Theodora Vandervitch. I knew them at a glance.
"My second wife found them in Theodora's chiffonier this morning," said Mr. Vandervitch, "and placed them in my hands. How did you dare write them!"
I murmured words to the effect that Theodora's fascinating personality was my excuse.

"She is so lovely," I explained, "that to know her is to adore her."
"But you don't know her," said Mr. Vandervitch.
"Oh, I beg pardon, sir; we were introduced at a little party," said I.
"Introduced or not, you don't know her," thundered Mr. Vandervitch. "One of my clerks can not possibly know my daughter. Why, the bare idea is preposterous."
I could only look at him.

"If we were in Russia I'd send you to Siberia for this indecorous and—treasonable conduct," continued Mr. Vandervitch. "As it is, I dismiss you without any recommendation from this firm. Go!"
"May I say one word, sir," I ventured.
"You may not," replied Mr. Vandervitch.
As he spoke the nostrils of his mighty nose distended, and he puffed forth through them in one great volume the smoke of all the cigarettes he had made and consumed during the interview. Where he had stored it I do not know, but it surrounded him and blotted him from my sight as I bowed myself out backward.

I went to my desk and took my hat. The three young shaven heads and the two old bald ones lifted themselves as I did so, and five astonished voices inquired
"What's the matter?"
I did not explain, but simply said "Good-bye," and vanished from their sight, as I supposed, forever.
When I reached the room I occupied in my boarding-house I recognized the truth of the adage: "Misfortunes never come single."
My pocket-book containing a month's wages, which had been paid the night before, was gone. I had either dropped it or some pick-pocket, noting my absorption in thought, had relieved me of it.
I had not a penny in the world; my week's board was due, and I had no friends to apply to.

My thoughts turned naturally to the Central Park reservoir, but I had lost the card, and lacked the energy to take me there.
I had had hopes of advancement at Vandervitch Bros.; that was over now; but I was young, and after dinner began to ponder on some way of earning fame and fortune and presenting myself to Theodora's father as an aspirant for the situation of son-in-law whom he could scarcely refuse.
At all events, it seemed certain that I could soon find a situation of some sort.

Three months from that day this object was not attained. I was desperate. I had sold my watch, my dress-coat, my tail hat and my sword-pun, and was deeply in debt besides. The day before I had happened to meet a fellow-clerk—one of the bald ones—and he told me that Theodora was engaged to a silver king or an oil king or a pecuniary king of some sort by the name of Boggs, and I had resolved to step for a sailor. I had wandered about as green hand on the schooner Polly Wittles; and, prior to going on board, passed the night in a dismal little hotel near the water's edge, an advance having been made me for that purpose on an umbrella, which I could not possibly use at sea.
The room was a whitewashed place like a cell and dimly lit with a cold, but I soon discovered that there was a register in the corner, and opened it. The neat rushed in so did considerable gas. But I sat down before it with my elbows on my knees and my chin in my palms, and fell into my old habit of building air-castles. I had just discovered a treasure island in mid-ocean, when my visions were dispelled by a loud click at my ear, and a voice growled:

"Ivan Vandervitch!"

I started and looked about me. There was no one in the room. Was it my fancy that played me this trick? No; for again the name was repeated by some one speaking Russian, which I understood very well, one of my duties having been to answer business letters in that language.
"Ivan Vandervitch," repeated the voice, "shall thus be sent to hades."
He did not say hades, but while we are translating why not be as elegant as we can?

I confess that, supposing it to be Satan in person who was speaking, I did not feel bound to combat his suggestion as to the final disposal of my Theodora's cruel parent. But a moment's reflection convinced me that the voice came through the register.
The flow of heat had ceased, and the person who had turned it into his room had established a sort of speaking-tube communication with mine. I was tempted to cry out:
"Hello! I am with you."

But, happily, I refrained, and the Russian spoke again shortly.
"Ivan Vandervitch little thought Peter Gorokoff would be able to revenge himself."
Then followed a recital of injuries received at the hands of Ivan Vandervitch some forty years before, when the men were young and in love with the same woman; and I also learned that Vandervitch still took an interest in the politics of his country, and had acted as a spy on some small secret society.

In consequence of this he was to be put out of the way, and Gorokoff, as a favor, had been authorized to do the deed. His passage had been paid to America for the purpose; but the fact that Vandervitch, being aware of his danger, had himself constantly guarded by a policeman in plain clothes, had stood in the way of his taking out.

"But at last," said Gorokoff, "my opportunity has come; the house next door is to let; the society has hired it. Vandervitch's bed-room has iron bars at the window, and wonderful locks on the door; but there is only a party wall between it and a certain room in the next house. I have made a hole in the wall large enough to enter by. Between me and his bedside remains only some gorgeous paper. He has been away for some days; he returns to-morrow; to-morrow night I cut the heavy paper so it lifts like a curtain, enter the room, plunge my dagger into Vandervitch's dashed heart. I leave it there; I pass through the hole; I gum down the paper; I replace brick and mortar. No trace remains that can tell that the poor little watchman of the empty house next door has freed the world of Ivan Vandervitch. Is my plan good?"
"Excellent," replied the other Russian.
"Embrace me, Peter Gorokoff!"

Nothing could be done that night, so I returned to bed, and when I awoke the whole thing seemed like a dream. At all events, what was it to me that an old tyrant, who had made a beggar of me, and was about to marry his daughter to a silver king, was about to be assassinated by a secret society of Russians?

"No doubt he rightly deserved it," I said, as I lay upon my dingy bed, thinking it all over. However, while dressing, I began to feel more like myself, and knew that I was giving my duty a good airing. I was warning of his danger, and the consequence was that I presented myself at the old office in the Swamp about the hour of noon.
Shortly a carriage drove up; Ivan stepped out of it. As he entered the building I stood before him.
"Sir," said I, "I want a word with you."

"You can't have it," said he.
"I must," said I.
"Oh," said he, putting up his eyeglasses, "upon my word, must to me—but this is free America."
"If you value your life you will listen to me," said I, in a lower tone.
"You threaten me, do you?" he asked.
"No," said I. "But Peter Gorokoff does."
Mr. Vandervitch turned pale.
"Come into my office," said he. He led the way. I followed him. "Sit down," said he.

"No," said I, "it is not necessary. I only desire to warn you that the society"—and I gave him the Russian name, which it is as well to omit here, as none of my readers could pronounce it—"have determined on your assassination. They have hired a house next to yours. Peter Gorokoff, who is to do the deed, has already made a hole in the wall of your bed-room, the paper only remains untouched. To-night, disguised as a night watchman, he will enter the house. If his plans succeed, you will be dead at dawn. You are now warned—I have done my duty, and you can prove the truth of my statements for yourself. I wish you good-day, and I turned on my heels.

"Stop, I pray you!" cried Ivan Vandervitch. "Tell me where you got your information."
I was on the point of doing so, but he had turned so pale and his manner had so altered, that a sudden thought struck me.
"That," I said, "is a secret of the sort that one keeps sacredly," and I moved toward the door.

"Stop, I pray you," he said again. "I fancied you merely one of the ordinary clerks—you have saved my life. No doubt it was for love of my daughter, Theodora."
"Who is to be married shortly, I hear," said I. "My congratulations to her."
"I will break off the match if you still love her, Mr. Prince," said Ivan Vandervitch. "She is in despair, and threatens to kill herself—she is still fond of you. I will take you into partnership, Mr. Prince; my brother will agree joyfully. One who has such wonderful sources of private political information as you have honored us by proposing to wed a daughter of the house. Remember, I don't know you."

"Miss Theodora Vandervitch," I replied, "would honor an Emperor if she bestowed her love on him."
"It is settled, then," said he.
And that is how it came about that I, Thomas Prince, am the youngest partner in the firm of Vandervitch, Brothers, and am married to my darling Theodora.

That night, Gorokoff, being arrested, was hanged away by the police, but died in prison of jaundice before the time appointed for his trial.
My father-in-law spends his life in conciliating men, in the belief that I am full of mysterious knowledge of Russian affairs; for I have been very careful never to let him know any thing about the rickety old register in the miserable hotel through which I overheard the words of poor old Peter Gorokoff—Family Story Paper.

Chief-Justice Chase's Romance.
Chief-Justice Chase had a love affair which he never forgot, although he lived to marry and bury three wives before he was forty years old. When a poor school-teacher in Washington he had, among his pupils the sons of William Wirt, the Attorney General of the United States. Miss Wirt's particular friend was Miss Elizabeth Cabell, of Richmond, Va., who frequently stayed at the home of the Wirts. Here Mr. Chase met her and lost his heart, but the proud Virginia girl, while pleased with the attentions of the clever Yankee youth, would not think of marrying a school-teacher.
